for this, it would not be just an automatic thing. It would be more of a bookkeeping thing that they would have to show and say, look and so you do have a more restrictive and you wish to enforce these and so we shall allow it. It would have to be something that showed on the books before they would do it.

SENATOR COPE: What I am getting at, though, suppose that an applicant could not meet the regulations of the city and then would go to the state, then that the state could overrule the city, then. There would be that probability.

SENATOR SIMPSON: This would be a possibility but if a... again, I think it would more...the answer would depend on who was doing the enforcement and if the local said, well we are not going to give it to you for these reasons and they cited reasons under their laws, then I would assume that the State Department of Health would not, also, give them the license because of those same reasonings.
